

Louisville, Kentucky

Union Metal was asked to work with various departments within the Louisville Metro governmental hierarchy to design decoartive traffic poles that would fit the needs of their growing population. They want to have the flexibility of using them on suburban multi-lane intersections, as well as smaller two lane downtown streets. A complete range of mast arms and strain poles were designed to meet all of these needs. Meeting AASHTO requirements, while maintaining historical features is a quality that allows Union Metal to be the industry leader for decorative traffic.

Cast into the door of each decorative base is the city logo, giving civic pride to a town already world renowned for horse racing, baseball bats, and downtown entertainment. a world class city with world class decorative poles.
